

HOSOKAWA MICRON B.V.

ATEX and HOSOKAWA SERVICE department

Since the 1st of July 2003 all relevant products could only sold, freely moved and operated in the EU territory when designed and intended in the expected environment according to Directive 94/9/EC (and other relevant legislations). Relevant information on the implementation and application of the Directive you can find on <http://ec.europa.eu/enterprise/atex/guide>

Directive 94/9/EC also provides harmonized requirements for non-electrical equipment, equipment intended for use in environments that are potentially hazardous due to dust or gas explosion hazards and for explosion protective systems. Safety devices intended for use outside explosive atmospheres which are required for or contribute to the safe functioning of equipment or protective systems with respect to risks of explosion are also included.

Many of our customers get involved with these guidelines but might not be familiar enough with them. In order to help you out in this matter, we summarize underneath what our Hosokawa Micron SERVICE department can mean for you.

Guidelines for used, repaired or modified products and spare parts are our daily course of business.

As user of equipment, you have to make a zone classification, an assessment of explosion risks and you have to fill-up an explosion protection document. We as manufacturer of your new or refurbished equipment will make a Technical Construction File, containing (mechanical) risk analyses, explosion protection methods and copies of Certificates of all sub-supplied (electrical) parts.

HOSOKAWA MICRON B.V.

We can advise you in:

- Assist in making a proper evaluation and classification of your installation
- Selecting appropriate equipment for the classified areas
- Examples of all documents

The content of the guidelines as mentioned above, can be found on the internet site:
